

A detailed close-up photograph of an electric motor's internal components, specifically the stator. The image shows several sets of copper windings (copper coils) mounted on a dark, possibly cast iron, stator core. The windings are arranged in a circular pattern, and their copper color is prominent. In the background, a portion of the motor's housing and a fan-like structure are visible. The lighting is bright, highlighting the texture of the copper and the metallic surfaces.
